To halt runway expansion

Court expected to grant injunction

By DALE GOWING Of The Roman Staff

A court injunction is expected to be granted within a week against runway expansion plans at Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

California attorney Jerrold A. Fadem, representing the Romulus factions seeking to halt further building at the airport, reportedly will file for the injunction at Wayne County Circuit Court either Friday or Monday.

Construction plans at the airport call for digging to begin on a new northeast-tosouthwest runway within the new two weeks. No specific date has been set.

HOWEVER, A LETTER sent this week to James F. Popp, chief of the Planning Branch of the Federal Aviation Administration, Airport Division, from Donald A. Walgreen. chief of the Federal Activities Branch of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), said that an important Environmental Protection Statement (EPS) filed by the 'In our opinion it should be the purpose of a noise assessment to accurately describe the accoustical setting of the project's future environmental impacts.'

airport is "misleading" in part and should be re-worked.

The re-working of the EPS and the subsequent review by the EPA could take as long as two years, estimated Tony Mabelitini, a leader of the Romulus Airport Neighborhood Action Committee (RANAC) who received a copy of the letter Monday.

Therefore, RANAC, which was in contact with Fadem Monday, is "certain that we will get the injunction," said Mabelitini. He said Fadem similarly was optimistic.

But the EPA's comments on the airport's EPS are just that-comments, and actually carry little weight in the Wayne County Road Commission's decisions, other officials said. The road commission operates the airport. HOWEVER, THE COMMENTS are expected to be weighed heavily by the courts in determining whether to award the injunction. The portion of the EPS deemed inaccurate by the EPA could prohibit the runway from being used if the document is not corrected. in the event the injunction is overruled, Mabelitini said... According to Romulus City Attorney William S. Munger, the injunction sought actually is a restraining order, which would be followed by a hearing.

tighter-knit community.

According to the letter, a copy of which went to Mabelitini, Walgreen said the "noise analysis (of the EPS) requires further clarification and documentation," and that several other federal agencies also question the airport's assessment of the projected noise volume of the runway.

THE LETTER SAID the charts and diagrams describing the accoustical effect of the new runway "could be misleading."

"In our opinion it should be the purpose of a noise assessment to accurately describe the accoustical setting of the project's future environmental impacts," Walgreen said, indicating that goal was not achieved by the airport in the EPS.

Apparently, the airport claimed in the statement that the facility would be quieter in the long run because of the new runway, which the EPA and Walgreen also labeled as "misleading."

Actually, newer and quieter airplane engines will be responsible for curbing much of the noise, they said.

THE AGENCY SUGGESTED a meeting between itself and the airport.

RANAC, which includes homeowners in the Oakbrooke Subdivision just south of the airport, is fighting the airport expansion along with the City of Romulus and Romulus School District, claiming that the noise problem created by a new runway would be much worse than it is now. The city and school district each contributed $15,000 for seeking the injunction, thus relieving the financial burden from

Romulus tries to eliminate road rubbish discards

The city is taking steps to eliminate some residents' habits of discarding large pieces of rublish along roadways.

The Romulus City Council has voted to place three large trash dumpsters at the city's three fire stations and is urging residents to deposit any rubbish items there that would not normally be picked up by the city's refuse collection service.

The dumpsters, which can hold 40-squareyards of rubbish and are rigged to be lifted and emptied by a garbage truck, will be placed on a 90-day trial basis at the fire stations at Goddard and Wayne roads, Eureka Road between Merriman and Middlebelt (next to the courthouse), and on

'There is just too much dumping of rubbish along the roads in Romulus...

The council's resolution to set up the dumpsters on a 90-day trial basis-with the option to sign a 2-year contract for their usewas spurred by Troutt's report that many residents have been complaining that the rubbish contractor has not been picking up

Did you ever wonder how the Christian flag seen in churches, had its origin? A speaker engaged for a "raily service" in the Brighton Chapel in Coney Island, N.Y., failed to appear on time on Sept. 26, 1897. Mr. Charles C. Overton, superintendent of the church school, substituted for the speaker and unexplainably began to talk about the American flag. Suddenly, he visioned a flag for the church; a flag unrestricted by geographical or creedal boundaries; a flag to remind all people of their allegiance to God. Extemporaneously, on the spur of the moment, he described a Christian flag as he visioned it. He pictured a field of white, signifying purity, innocence and peace; in the corner as union of deep blue for a symbol of faith, trust and sincerity - with a Latin cross emblazoned in red.

The following Sunday, the Christian flag was draped for the first time in the chancel of the Brighton Chapel. It was made by Mr. Annin, a flag manufacturer who did much to secure it's adoption by churches. It's use spread rapidly throughout the U.S. and today is seen throughout the world. Watch for next week's column which will relate how the pledge of allegiance to the Christian flag originated.

Vice-president is just simple, sturdy

Editor's note: This fourth installment of "Jerry Ford, Up Close" chronicles the vice-president's rise from the hay fields of Ottawa County to the corridors of the Capitol.

"Some say Jerry Ford is a square," a television commentator intoned on a special news background broadcast. "But perhaps he's just as simple and sturdy as Grand Rapids

Around "simple and sturdy" revolves a whole syndrome of myths that reveal the romanticism of the "Eastern establishment news media."

The "simple, sturdy" or regional myth is based on the theory that there is much that is good in American politics, but you have to get away from the strip of Atlantic coast between Long Island Sound and the Potomac River to find it. The farther you go, the simpler and sturdier (for which equate lovable and foursquare) the politicians get.

ALL VERY FINE, but political life is not really that simple. Grand Rapids and west Michigan, even back in 1945, formed a politically sophisticated metropolitan area.

Grand Rapids had established gambling joints, open all night and selling liquor after legal hours.

There was a red-light district, and all the illegal activity flourished with the knowledge of the administration in city hall and the police department.

This was the kind of politics Jerry Ford and his backers wanted to change, but it didn't come easy against a political machine that had run quite well for two decades. When Ford came home from the war, it was under attack but still the dominant political force. Republican, of course. There was no effective, enduring Democratic Party in Michigan until financier, banker, insurance broker, arranger of contracts with the state, and the most formidable pol in the western Stenson believed some of the lobbyists systematically were buying votes in the legislature, he so testified before the grand jury that was called to investigate the whole lobby mess, and strange things began to happen. AN OFFICIAL OF a Grand Rapids trucking company who testified during the grand-jury investigation was killed when a train hit his car. State Sen. Earl W. Munshaw of Grand Rapids was found in his auto, dead of carbon-monoxide poisoning two days after he had testified.

A short time later State Sen. Warren G. Hooper of Albion testified before the grand jury. He was believed to have talked about McKay and others interested in banking legislation. Two days later, he was shot to death.

The grand jury hurriedly was given $250,000, a big investigative staff and public approval for an investigation that turned into a circus.

Result? Many indictments but only four legislators convicted of graft. There was a hue and cry after Frank D. McKay, who was suspected popularly of having been somewhere in the background of Sen. Hooper's execution, on the other side in the but no such connection was ever established.

On the other side in west Michigan politics there was an improbable group of reformers who set out to break an improbable group of the probable group of the pr McKay's hold on the Republican Party and Grand Rapids government.

Organizer of this reform group, dubbed the "Home Front," was a dentist, W. B. VerMeulen, or "Doc," as friends called him. He organized methodically, starting at the precinct level just as any professional pol would, but he had the instinct of a description of the control of t stincts of a demagogue and a ward boss. It was a personal crusade, the crusade of a zealot.

VerMeulen had influence, but he lacked manpower. At the end of 1945 the manpower came streaming home and he was

This was the setting in which Jerry Ford committed himself to public affairs. He certainly had no illusions about politics; but he did have ideals and goals ... and ambition. He also had a long way to go.

AT HIS DEBUT IN 1948, Ford was so far down in the political pecking order that McKay did little about it when he challenged incumbent Congressman Bartel J. Jonkman. Jonkman was a real Frisian stonehead. Frisian stonehead is the epithet that one Grand Rapids Dutchman used for another who was too stubborn to be tolerated even by other Like Michigan's Sen. Arthur Vandenberg, Jonkman had gone into World War II an isolationist and had, with Vandenberg, voted against appropriations to modernize and enlarge the armed forces.

Vandenberg emerged from the war a father to the United Nations. Jonkman managed to come out neo-isolationist. That's real stubbornness, and it made Jonkman very

AT 35 JERRY had the right amount of youth, the right amount of maturity, and an abundance of masculine hand-someness. He was eminently electable and everyone knew it.

His first manifestation of political savvy was to remain aloof from the highly personal assault VerMeulen conducted against McKay. He had the full support of the "Home Front" organization without chowdering and marching with it.

Jerry's problems were twofold: Congressman Jonkman was the incompant and his name and acceptate were Dutch.

was the incumbent and his name and ancestry were Dutch. Ford pondered the public mood and the ethnic composition of Kent and Ottawa counties.

What kind of voters were they? In Grand Rapids the population was about half Dutch, perhaps one-quarter Polish, and the rest a melange of white anglo-Saxon Protestants like Jerry, Italians, blacks and Germans. The Dutch vote was all-important.

JERRY DECIDED on two main campaign methods: going out on the street and into the countryside to shake the hand of every ofter he could and drumming away at Jonkman with a challenge to personal debate on international affairs and other national issues. He did not mention McKay, but he had one encounter with him.

Leaving a meeting in Cedar Springs, he ran into the gray eminence, who had taken the trouble to journey a few miles north to size up the young interloper.

Jerry's words were: "Hello, Mr. McKay, how are you,

McKay uttered just one sentence before departing: "I like your style, young man, but Barney Jonkman is going to stomp all over you."

Jerry later said: "Just being there in Congress, just hearing what is said in debate and in the cloakrooms, just knowing firsthand about legislation, gives the incumbent a great advantage. In a personal debate the incumbent is bound to seem knowledgeable about the job and he can point out where the challenger doesn't have real knowledge."

In later years Jerry made it an axiom that he would debate any challenger to his replection and he did it repeatedly and man really was afraid of Jerry.

"Oh, he's part Dutch," Stiles replied quickly.
"Ja? Den I vote by him," promised the elder.
AS IT TURNED OUT the majority of Dutch voters didn't cast a straight ethnic ballot. In the primary Jerry defeated Jonkman 23,632 to 14,341, with 62.2 per cent of the total vote, and he carried the largely Dutch Ottawa County by about 500 votes. In the general election he won with 74,191 votes, or 60.5 per cent. He was not to receive less than that victory percentage until 1972, when he defeated Jean McKee 104,045 to 65,775 or 60.3 per cent. In the primary Jerry had something else going for him that has not been spelled out often or in detail in later political

He had the active support of many liberal Democrats, including Leonard Woodcock, then a regional director of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, parent to the United Auto Workers International Union of which Woodcock later became president.

When Jerry won, there was a kind of nonpartisan celebration at Jack Stiles' country home. A supporter had bet $50 that Jerry would carry Ottawa County and in the flush of victory donated the money toward the purchase of a formal wedding gown for Elizabeth (everyone called her Betty)

NOW EVERYTHING was go and the two were married Oct. 15, 1948 in Grace Episcopal Church. A few at the wedding, including his horrified mother, noted that Jerry was wearing one brown and one black shoe.

Jerry Ford's fiancee actually had been Elizabeth Bloomer Warren. She had been married six years to William C. Warren of Grand Rapids and had divorced him Sept. 22, 1947, eight months before her engagement to Jerry. No previous account of the Jerry Ford family mentions this fact, but the names on the wedding license and the divorce records of Grand Rapids' Superior Court attest it was so. The petition alleged the usual "extreme cruelty and complete in-compatibility" and boiled down to the fact Warren was a traveling salesman and away from home much of the time.

There were no children; the divorce was uncontested.

It was not a disgrace to be divorced in the Grand Rapids of that era. But on the other hand it was most emphatically not a political asset. Jerry didn't advertise his mother's divorce from his real father, or Betty's divorce. It was prudent

Press causes stampede with Watergate stories purgatory in the third year of Watergate. Even some of the nation's top editors are weighing whether expiation is needed for the sins of excess and cynicism.

Watergate is a story that got away from the press and caused a stampede. And in the nature of stampedes, the press became a willing adversary, as much the source as the

The press, the constitutionally protected guardian of the people, itself became the victim of - and then a leader of - the cynicism toward politicians and the distrust of our institutions. It is the route of madness, and then of destruction. THE PERFORMANCE for the most part has been a prancing, jabbing attack on the person of President Richard M. Nixon. Evidence is developing that many of the early disclosures were self-serving leaks from government agencies already investigating Watergate.

The last Watergate story has not yet been written and, with parts of the case before the courts and other parts before Congress, the attack is turning to Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, whose diplomatic feats already are legends. He has negotiated the end of the Vietnam war, the Arab oil embargo, and has established a new basis for peace in the Middle East, among other national triumphs. Neither Nixon nor Kissinger are ordinary men, nor are their deeds common. Yet they are being accorded less consideration than muggers on a dark street There is a trauma in the land, a confluence of crises: Watergate and the constitutional peril, the economic enigma of simultaneous inflation and scarcity, the social and moral separateness. Taken together, they constitute a terrible threat to even the basic order of

THE CLAIMED journalistic triumphs of Watergate already are falling apart. Even the Pulitzer Prize committee is under attack for rewarding those who kept the story alive for more than two years, however questionable their sources and however suspect their

The trap for journalism was the use of unattributed sources and unconfirmed leaks, though the Washington Post stated that it required confirmation by two sources. But even the Post is acknowledging that it ran with two inaccurate Watergate stories.

There is a truism in the newsrooms that a reporter is only as good as his source of information. It is left to the judgment of the reporter and his editors whether the source is accurate and credible. In much of the Watergate coverage, the reader and viewer were given unattributed information and had only blind faith in the written or spoken word

Now that the stampede is quieting, the press critics and the public are in a mood to demand an accounting. Is it the role of the press to seek out and print unsubstantiated charges - whether or not they are later proven? Does the end really justify the

IT IS TRUE that the press has been lied to and baited, diverted by evil men for their own purposes. But if the press can be so treated and, in response, act like a spoiled brat, then journalism is in a very perilous state.

Throughout the Watergate story, Pan newspapers have defended the President's right to be treated fairly and have criticized those in the media who stampeded after the smell of his political blood.

It gives us no pleasure to know that we were right all along.

Eager Beavers Day Camp continues for third year

By LEE SMITH Suburban Living Editor

The Eager Beavers Day Camp, a project for the mentally retarded children of Romulus, is in its third year as a community service project, according to Geneva Clark, co-ordinator of the camp and social worker for Family and Neighborhood Services.

The camp was made possible this year from funds and services offered by various groups and organizations. The Romulus Progressive Club, Romulus Kiwanis Club, American Progressive Assoc., the Romulus Jaycees and Jaycees Auxiliary, the Romulus Board of Education and Family and Neighborhood Services have lent a helping hand in keeping the camp open for another

Committee may have saved Michigan $100,000

Four months before its final report is due, a special Senate committee investigating the operations of the Michigan Mental Health Department may have saved the state about $100,000 and solved an ongoing problem at the same time. State Sen. John E. McCauley (D-Grosse Ile), chairman of the committee, said his group's 2-man investigating team has recommended moving the forensic center now operated in Ypsilanti to what is known as H Building in Northville.

"Currently, the forensic center is the object of a remodeling program that is estimated to cost about $125,000 or more," McCauley said. "This involves extensive or more." McCauley said. "This involves extensive reworking of sections C-4 and C-6 at Ypsilanti. "THE INSTALLATION of a fence alone will cost about $85,000," he added

"At the same time, our staff found that the H Building at Northville was constructed along maximum security lines, is not being fully utilized, and is scheduled for remodeling to accommodate mentally retarded patients," he said. "Such a program will mean the elimination of many of the security features now in existence.

"It seems to me that building up security programs in one

McCauley added that many Ypsilanti residents have become increasingly concerned over the prospect of having a forensic clinic in their midst. Many of the patients to be treated there are criminally insane and likely to present a danger if they escape.

Piper Ornatum is one of 600 Numerous throughout tropical because of its aromatic species of shrubs belonging to America, the plant can prove a tropical shrub family, to be valuable economically

According to horticulturists at Michigan State University, piper is an excellent, decorative houseplant. A tall clumber with slender, reddish stems, the plant has waxy, shield-like leaves colored in deep green with silvery pink markings. The markings will turn white as the plant ages,

In planting the piper, the soil should be rich in humus or other organic matter. An addition of rough manure and some loam will give the soil structure.

The soil should be kept evenly moist, but not constantly wet. Temperatures for the plants can range from 50 to 65 degrees at night and 70 to 85 degrees on a sunny day.

In exposing the plant to sunlight, horticulturists recommend diffused light. Ideally, the piper should be placed near a window on the east side of a home.

The plant can be propagated by stem tip cuttings.

Cuttings are leaves, stems or roots cut from the stock plant. There are two types of stem cuttings, tip and cane; and three types of leaf cut-tings, whole leaf, leaf sections and leaf-bud.

Tip cuttings are suitable for propagating coleus, schefflera, geranium, fuchsia, Christmas cactus, pointsettia, philodendron, and other similar types. Tip cuttings are cut just below a leaf and should be three to five inches long. The more leaves left on the tip, the better. Remove any lower leaves before inserting the tip in the rooting

Cane cuttings are used for propagating dumbcane, Chinese evergreen, dracaena, and similar plants with canelike stems. Cut the cane three inches above the soil line and then cut it into pieces two to three inches long.

The circular rings, or leaf scars, contain dormant buds or eyes. Each piece should have two of these circular rings. Place the cuttings slightly below the surface of the rooting medium, making sure the eye is facing up The eye will eventually form a new stem, and the remaining stock plant also will sprout a new

In raising violets

He has blossoms as hobby

Of The Enterprise Roman Staff Five years before Arthur Schneider retired he decided he was going to do something to avoid one of the biggest problems that beset retirees-

It was then, 15 years ago, that Schneider, of Canton Township began raising African Violets. Today he is busy watering, fertilizing cross-pollinating and otherwise babying 160 seedlings that will become full-blooming plants in about six months. They are only the latest batch of the scores of plants he has raised over the

Schneider's wife, Irene, summed up the reason for the hobby in a slightly different and perhaps more accurate

He was looking for something that he could do when he retired so he wouldn't get under my skin," she said, as her husband smiled in agreement

Schneider keeps his plants in a small room in their mobile home, where they sprout under flourescent lights which to them is the sun. A TIMER REGULATES the amount of artificial sunlight they get each day, and the lights turn off after 12 to 16 hours so the plants can get some sleep, he said.

Once you have some good plants, you don't really need to buy any more because you can get a new plant from a leaf of an old one or you can cross pollinate the seeds from your best African Violets, he added. Schneider uses the cross-pollination method to produce new plants from the dust-like seeds of his violets. He has learned the fine points of his hobby by reading a bi-monthly magazine that is published for people who raise the plant and by the oldtrial-and-error

In the past, Schneider has given most of his flowers to church bazaars and other organizations and shouldered much of the expense himself.

But this year, he's going to see if he can find a church that will use the flowers for a sale of some kind and return a portion of the profits to him to cover expenses OVER THE YEARS,

Greenery in bottle produces a magic garden under glass

If you're an artist, it could be a new medium in which to express yourself. If you're a gardener, it could be a way to discover talents you may not have known you possess. And if you're neither, it could be a most intriguing new experiment. It's a garden in a bottle.

Preparing the garden will be a challenge, but an enjoyable one. Then watching the magic that happens as the bottle becomes a selfcontained little world of its own-making its own atmosphere, feeding the living plants that grow in it - is a year-long pleasure.

The members of the American Association of Nurserymen naturally are the authorities on the subject, and they have several suggestions to help you get started with your project. It all begins with a bottle. Any good sized one will do. If you have one you've been saving because of an interesting shape or special significance, all the better. FIRST TO GO in is about an inch of gravel, just fine enough to fit through the neck of the bottle. The soil on top of the gravel, a few inches deep, should be dry when you put it in — and a funnel of some sort will be helpful at this stage. Use very small plants such as ferns, mosses, violets, tree, seedlings of hollies junipers, hemlock and other similar materials. Certain minia ture roses also enjoy life in a bottle.

Plants need love

Three ingredients of success in the continuing health of indoor plants in a home or office are light, humidity, and temperature.

The American Association of Nurserymen counsels that the amount of light required by an indoor planting depends on the type of plant, itself. The garden center will recom-mend the density of light required for each plant. For some, the natural light available will suffice; others will require additional

Plant dusting extends decoratives' life span

Household plants like pieces of furniture are prone to collecting dust, and light dusting of the decoratives not only can improve their appearance but add to their life span.

Horticulturists recommend that plants be dusted, washed or polished to improve the appearance and growth of the foliage. Plant polishes are available in garden stores or floral shops and can be applied

The plant, however, should not be wilting when the cleanup is undertaken.

If uncertain as to the plant's tolerability of polishing, indoor gardeners should apply the polish to two or three leaves. Let the plant set for about a week. If there is no damage to the cleaned leaves, then the rest of the plant can be shined.

However, plants having furry leaves, should never be polished. Horticulturists recommend that such plants be dusted with a camel hair brush to avoid a scuffed ap-

A wide variety of annuals are asking to be planted in tubs or pots so they can be moved from place to place to add their color to different environments around the patio or terrace or place to play in your yard. The list of permanent plants that thrive in containers is long.

Planting in a container is no more effort than usual garden planting, if a few simple steps are observed.

HANDSOME VARIETIES of containers, made of oak, redwood, cypress, artificial stones, and other materials, always are available at garden centers, or you may develop your own from an interesting barrel or cask or pot you find appealing.

Whether you buy the containers or prepare your own, you'll find easier mobility if casters are placed derneath. If wheels or rollers are not used, make sure to elevate the tub on blocks or bricks to assure aeration and

The first material to put into the container is a layer of cinders, small rocks, gravel or other drainage material. Then fill the tub with coarse, fertile soil. Give all this a thorough watering and let it drain before you plant.

Once your plants are installed, regular feeding and watering is important. Most experts suggest a bi-weekly application of liquid fertilizer after healthy roots fill the container.

The soil should be kept moist, and this may require a good soaking every two to four days, even more frequently in

IF YOU HAVE planted permanent growth, plan to take off the top two or three inches of soil from the container about once a year and replace it with a fresh mixture. Soil for annuals should be replaced entirely each time

Catalytic reactors save fuel

Information recently released by auto researchers at Boron Oil indicated that cars equipped with catalytic reactors, rather than the current polution control equipment, will get up to 10 per cent better gas mileage.

But researchers also noted that the equipment, which will be installed as standard equipment beginning with 1975 model cars, will not yield enough savings to alleviate the current shortage of fuel.

Motorists still will have to consolidate trips and drive slower to conserve gasoline, they said.

It's time to take a vacation

By TOM MOORADIAN Eagle Sports Editor

It is always difficult to concentrate on the job the day before a scheduled vacation.

And that is the problem I'm tackling tonight. Next week I will be enjoying a couple of weeks in Toronto, so I'm clearing off the desk for staffer Dale Gowing, who will be moving back

But, before we leave you, there are a couple of notes we have to clear out of the way. One is the story of 10-year-old Keith Zimmerman, an excellent Wayne wrestler who won the Keith competed in the nationals over the weekend in Cleveland and finished fourth in the heavyweight category. And he's 114 pounds. With talent like that Wayne Memorial will never have to worry about fielding a strong wrestling team.

Oh, yes, would like to give credit to Jeff Smith, who was our source of the Zimmerman story.

'Keith is my friend," said 10-year-old Jeff, "and it's his birthday today. Would you please write about him, he's really a nice guy.

Eleven-years-old - and 114 pounds - who would dare in Zimmerman's age groups call Keith anything but nice?

NEXT, LET'S CLEAR the air about the Garden City All-Star and ITM games.

According to Dil Clack, who serves as the Garden City Class A Invitational League baseball commissioner, the league will not field an All-Star team against their arch rivals next year, but will allow the team at the top of the standings to challenge the national powerhouse.

"We have installed the rule prior to the season for next year," explained Clack. "Starting in 1975 we're going to permit our top team in the league to play ITM.

'Also, the team that wins the Garden City championship will play the Detroit winner for the right to advance to the state tournament," he said.

GARDEN CITY, which holds the National Baseball Congress franchise, has a six-team Class A league this year and has been in existence for the past three years.

This year the Garden City All-Stars will have a shot at the Detroiters - and not the league champ. The conglomeration of the top players in the league will take on Detroit's winner July 10-20 in the best of three series.

for July 26, then the NBA championship slated for sometime

Finally, golfers who have competed in the annual Wayne Eagle-Parks and Recreation City Golf Championships over the years and intend to this year shouldn't become impatient.

We're negotiating with golf course managers on dates and the last week of July we'll be back to get the tournament

In fact, Mike Gouin, of the Wayne Parks and Recreation Department, said that he has already ordered the trophies. That can only mean the tournament is "on"

See you all in a couple of weeks, folks.

EARL KEIM

WE ARE

The HELPFUL People

We Sold a Home in Oklahoma City

What's so unusual is the fact that we never saw the home. And we've sold homes in Kingman, Chicago, Decatur, and even in Windsor, all in the same manner. And in each case, the owners were completely convinced the price obtained and the manner in which the sale was handled, was in their best interest. We, like you, must depend on competent people to properly advice us. And because we are a member of NATIONWIDE REFERRAL SYSTEM, information in each locality and the services of top-flite Realtors, in fact, an entire network, is available to us across the country. So if you're contemplating a move to another area, we invite you to obtain any information you require, in any location, without cost or obligation, by giving us a phone call.

Nationwide is another exclusive membership that EARL KEIM REALTY offers to serve you even better.
